Cub Scouts Basics

Cub Scouts is designed to involve children in group activities. Boys and girls earn recognition and awards while gaining a sense of personal achievement from each new skill they learn.

Your Cub Scout Belongs to a Den

A den is made up of children who are the same age and gender. Dens meet two or three times a month to work on advancement activities. Den meetings typically last one hour and are run by a den leader, but parents attend and share in the planning of den meetings.

Your Cub Scout and Your Den Belong to a Pack

A pack consists of one or more dens and meets once a month. The Cubmaster leads the pack meeting and each den participates with skits, games, songs, and ceremonies. Each meeting will also include awards and recognition for Cub Scouts.

Your Pack is Run by a Parent Committee

Led by a committee chair, the parent committee includes den leaders, pack leaders and parents. The committee selects leaders, finds meeting places, keeps records and finances, tracks youth advancement, and plans activities. The committee meets at least monthly, and as needed. The pack committee functions under the direction of the pack's chartering organization.

Cub Scout Advancement - Recognition & Awards

In Scouting, advancement is the process by which a member meets certain requirements and earns recognition. The Cub Scout advancement program is a blend of activities Scouts do in their homes and activities they do in a den meeting. As requirements are completed, Scouts are awarded recognition items to mark their progress.

Cub Scouts first earn the Bobcat badge by demonstrating a basic understanding of the Cub Scout Motto, Scout Oath and Scout Law. The Bobcat badge should be earned within the first two weeks of joining Cub Scouts.

How Can I Help?

Successful dens and packs rely on active parent volunteers. Volunteer leaders help guide the Scouting adventure for their child and others. What could be more valuable than quality time spent with your Cub Scout? There are many ways you can help, here are just a few:

Working directly with Scouts...

Den leaders - Lead the den at den and pack meetings. Participates in the monthly pack committee meeting.

Cubmaster - Works closely with the pack committee to plan and carry out the annual program. Runs the monthly pack meeting.

Parent Committee: Planning, Communication, Support...

The pack's parent committee meets monthly, working together to give needed support to the cubmaster and den leaders. An active parent committee handles behind the scenes work so the cubmaster and den leaders can focus on working directly with the Cub Scouts.

Parent Helpers...

There are many opportunities for parents to help by taking on "one-shot" projects, such as coordinating the popcorn sale, service projects, picking up awards at the Scout office and more. Your willingness to help when you can will make all the difference in your child's experience.

Training for Volunteers - Online at My.Scouting.org

Specific Cub Scout leader training courses, which can be completed at your own pace, are available online for all volunteers.

Youth Protection Training, available online, is required for all volunteers and must be completed before submitting your volunteer application.
